The pool in the gutter ran clear to Stanton street, No. 99, and J. Lee, laundryman at No 105, declared that he had been half-sick all ammer long, and believed that it was due to the nith in the street.

8. Weltman, grocer at No. 31, was vehe ment in his denunciation of the trick of the Street-Cleaning Department of sending sweepers to waste their time heaping up the accumulations of muck to be on the street for weeks-for no carts ever came to remove it he said.

There was a particularly bad section opposite Nos. 73, 75, 75% and 77, and S. Klein, shoe dealer at No. 75, said:

AT 97 COLUMBIA STREET.

"I have been talking with my neighbors and we are going to complain to the Board of Health. We sweep the filth out of the mudgutter, but it is never taken away. The Cleaners have not been on this block in three weeks, and previous to their last visit there was a stretch of six weeks of negicet." Joseph Engel, of No. 75%, assented to this and added : "Great Scott I can't remember when they they were here inst. When they do come It is only a farce—a dismal farce for us, who live or do business here.

The garbage men come nearly every day but they never bother about what runs over the barrel and upon the selevalls. They let it rip, and pass on with a high and mighty air, as if they couldn't see it.

Ex-Convict O'Hara's Daring Escape from Jefferson Market Prison,

Cut Iron Bars in His Cell Door and Window-He Is Still at Large.

Ex-Convict Eugene O'Hara, who was a prinoner in Jefferson Market Jail awaiting action by the Grand Jury on the charge of attempts ing to murder Policeman Maguire, of the Twentieth Precinct, escaped from that prison at an early hour this morning, and is still at large. O'Hara was confined in cell No. 17, on the second tier, on the south side of the prison. At 5 o'clock this morning, Reeper John Quirk, while going his rounds, discovered that O'Hara was not in his cell, though the fron gate of the cell was securely locked. Looking at the transom part of the gate, short bars were cut out altogether. A third bar had been cut at one end and bent. After crawling through this opening in the transom, O'Hara had evidently made his escape through the window in the southeast Heavy fron bars protect the window, but

O'Hara had cut one of the bars through with a saw, and another bar he had cut at one end and bent upwards, so that he could get A short sheet had been used by the prisoner to let himself down to the next story below,
